Paul,

Please add this to the correspondence.

Mark

Hi Mark,

There was a short-lived attempt on the part of a handful of gallery and shop owners in the Arts District this spring, myself included, to create an Arts District zoning overlay in order to have some control over the inevitable development which will be happening in this area due to the extension of the sewer system down Dukes County Avenue. Thad Harshbarger was the lead proponent, and he got as far as taking a very rough draft to the Planning Board, for informational purposes only. As soon as we heard from neighbors that they were not in favor of the idea, we immediately dropped the concept, and have no plans to re-introduce it. The effort was totally separate from and not related in any way to Bradley Square. It has no relevance, and does not belong with the MVC's record of information related the Bradley Square project.
