To MVC

The Lagoon is my back yard, I have lived here on the Lagoon for 27 years, worked on the pond for many years before that and have enjoyed all the recreational amenities the pond provides --swimming, kayaking, power boating, mooring, as well as the abundant source of quahogs all those years which has provided many meals for our household.

With that background I certainly wouldn't want to see water quality deteriorate further.

The real danger to the Lagoon is and has been the development of residential properties in the watershed, each with it own private onsite septic system, well landscaped with fertilized yard. Not the boats or the boaters.

There are hundreds of pages that could be written on this and associated issues. But let me just say that I see the Safe Harbor proposal as a step in the right direction, with the rack storage and a net minus count of hulls in the water. My vote would be to approve the project.
