Thanks Dan, I get it. There is a part of me that wants to get something from them. But I get it.

I expected someone else to mention it, and Jim did. I did not want to give them a reason to approve – suggesting that the sound barrier is acceptable. It's not. But following up with staff should assure that there is a condition that requires a sound wall./

I failed to mention that if this is approved at the very least there should be a sound wall to protect my clients.
