Hi Alex,

We were going to address this in our presentation but the building has undergone a few renovations where the roof, decks/porches and some of the windows/trim were rebuilt or replaced so a lot of the original materials are no longer there but any of the remaining trim work and ornate details that are still part of the house would be salvaged and reused. We would also be open to salvaging the railings and columns that are currently installed but not necessarily original features and we are proposing to replicate details from the original as part of our new design.

Thanks,

Thanks. I believe we were also waiting on information about what materials might be salvaged from the current building.
